

WHAT IS ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH?

Environmental Health is “The systematic development, promotion, and conduct of measures which modify or otherwise control those external factors in the indoor and outdoor environment which might cause illness, disability or discomfort through interaction with the human system.”

- Joseph A. Salvato
Environmental Engineering & Sanitation

ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH SPECIALIST (EHS)

An Environmental Health Specialist (EHS) is a public health professional who protects public health from detrimental conditions in the environment through education, consultation, collaboration, and enforcement of environmental health regulations. Environmental Health Specialists are college graduates with training in environmental health, public health, sanitary science, or one of the physical sciences. An Environmental Health Specialist works with other professionals in their community to provide a safe and healthy environment.
